

When talking about Switzerland, what will we think about? Watches, mountains, and cheese? I've got a chance to travel to Switzerland at the end of spring this year. It's the time when snow have already melted away, and the road made by stone were starting to bare.

The most impressive things in Switzerland for me were belong to its watches, which were so precision that can be sold for a high price. But after this travel, there is another thing that attracts my eyes—the public works. In Switzerland, at least in Bern, the first city I met in Switzerland, the street lights are all hanging by a cable in mid air. There are many cable by the side of Swiss. As the photo showed, trams, street lights or maybe internet cables were all above Swiss head.

And last one, is a photo that I take at my shadow, with the most famous mountain in Switzerland, Matterhorn.
