

Okinawa, Japan

I visited Okinawa this summer vacation. It was a 5 days trip that I traveled independently with my five friends. Before the trip, I thought Okinawa is a beautiful island with a lot of beaches. But I didn't realize it is also a historical city.

The Shuri Castle was an ancient castle in Okinawa. There were a fabulous palace of the Ryukyu kingdom. Outside of the building was like a Chinese palace. But inside of the palace was more like a decoration of Japanese palace. I felt the style of the building is a mix of Chinese and Japanese.

In addition to visiting the conventional castle, we enjoyed the seafood dinner many times. There were plenty seafood which I've never seen in Taiwan. But my favorite was roasted prawn. The prawn was as big as my hand. The meat was so delicious that I'm still impressed.

The weather was fine during the trip. The sky was blue, and the sun was strong. We had no reason not to go to the beach. Because there was no polluted, I could easily see plenty fish around the coral. I wish here are also a enviable beach in Taiwan like there. If I have a chance, I really want to go to the beach and eat prawns again.
